

*Maintain chaos.
Whine a lot.*

Make sure that your daughter is skilled in everything except the art of making a home.

If at all possible, don't stay home to raise your children but, instead, entrust them to experts who will raise them better than you ever could.

Pit yourself and your daughter against the men in your family.

If you are a single mom, let your boyfriend move in with you so your daughter will have a father figure.

Make sure your daughter is in touch with her feelings.

Assure your daughter she can always get married, be a mom and make a home after she's done everything else.

Titus 2 for Life

...mentoring on the journey of life with the Word of God.

Linda Bartlett
3031 River Road Iowa Falls, IA 50126
lindabartlett@mchsi.com
641.373.0964

www.titus2-4life.org
www.ezerwoman.wordpress.com
www.aftertheabortion.wordpress.com

TITUS 2 FOR LIFE
SATIRE

HOW TO MENTOR A FOOLISH WOMAN

The wisest of women builds her house, but folly with her own hands tears it down

PROVERBS 14:1

What you can do to help your daughter tear down her someday home

Do everything for her and don't expect her to help around the house.

Get her involved in every possible activity, club, and organization so she can keep up with her friends and not be left out.

Teach her to be aggressive and always prepared to one-up the boys.

Make her the center of attention so that when she grows up, she'll expect to have everyone and everything be all about her.

Make sure that everything you do with her is fun; hang out together and be like sisters.

Don't correct her when she makes a mistake because you might hurt her feelings and risk your friendship.

Shield her from disappointments, hardships, and the consequences of poor choices.

Get her everything she wants for her room and make sure she has unlimited privacy away from the family with her laptop, ipad and smartphone .

And here's more...

Don't ask her to go with you to visit relatives or church members in the hospital or nursing home because that's not much fun for a young girl.

Don't encourage her to do acts of service for other people unless, of course, she's getting extra credit for a class project because that will look good when she applies for a scholarship.

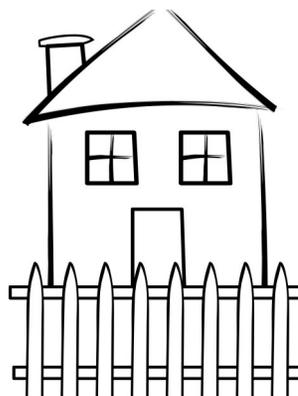

Let her interrupt whenever she has something to say because it's probably important to her.

Make sure that she has subscriptions to the most popular magazines for girls because she'll learn a lot about sensuality and sex appeal, the latest fads and fashions, how to get a man's attention, and what all the famous people are doing.

Raise your daughter's self-esteem by telling everyone how beautiful she is and buying her all the pretty clothes you didn't have.

Don't bother teaching her etiquette and good manners because it's acceptable in this culture to be more casual and laid back.

Keep reminding her about all the things you've had to give up to be a stay-at-home mom.

Be quiet when the voices of the world tempt your daughter to believe that she can have it all.

Remind her that a good man will control his temper and be careful with his language, but freely express your emotions so everyone knows how you feel.

Be gone from home as much as possible because you wouldn't want her to think that anything important happens there.

Help your daughter develop a critical spirit by perfecting one of your own.

Teach her to blame others when life gets tough.

Make her think that women have to put men down in order to build themselves up.

Show her how to help men by quickly taking charge whenever you think your husband is too passive.

Let her think that marriage is a 50/50 partnership.

Don't let her catch you practicing patience, kindness, and selflessness with your husband lest she think you too submissive.

When her father sets boundaries for her clothing or behavior, find ways to help her undermine his authority.

Be intimidated by the culture and embarrassed by your vocation of wife, mother and homemaker.

Neglect using the mentoring model of Titus 2:3-5.